The lost Virginity and Painful Reality – Love Hurts!

It was a challenging day for me at the office with a full session of clients. Each of them had their own brand of problems that needed to be addressed. They presented these problems to me.

One client in particular, CJ (not the real name) came huffing and puffing into my office with the fury of a wild horse waiting to clobber anyone who dared to annoy him. After being in the business as an Astrological Consultant for a few decades I was alert to the warning signs.

I then went into my psychic mode. This allowed me to feel this person's pain and the level of its intensity. I picked up real bad vibes that this person was going to do harm to someone close to him. I had to put this person's emotions on hold, otherwise disaster would have struck immediately.

I said, "CJ please sit down. I can sense what you are going through. Please let me tell you what I can see you experiencing in your life". CJ seemed unsure and was taken aback. However, he did what I told him to anyway.

In order to get him to relax, I asked him if he would like a drink. He seemed intent on what I had to say and quickly waved off the offer of a drink.

Getting the message that he wanted to hear about the psychic vibes that I was having, I proceeded with what I had to say. I said: "Ok, I am picking up this vibe from you. I sense that you have been hurt by a loved one and feel that you been lied to. It is a personal unresolved issue and you are at an impasse. You don't want to break away from this loved one as you feel that she is the light of your life. Unfortunately, at present, this love has been shadowed by a dark cloud."

I told him that I felt this was a resolvable problem. All he needed was a solution, a key to unlock the chains that painfully bound him and wouldn't let him go.

CJ burst out in torrent of words and told me that he was disappointed with his wife who he thought was a virgin before they married.

Then one day, during “a truth session between them” she told him that she was not a virgin. She went on to say that she had a short episode with her first boyfriend and the relationship got sexual. Within days after they had sex, they (she and boyfriend) broke up. CJ stormed out of their apartment and have not gone home ever since. This was five days before he had met me.

I was privileged that this client trusted me with the experiences that he was facing. CJ came from the old school of thought which profess that first you are born, later you grow up and go to school, then you when you get a job, you marry the girl of your heart and have a family life and you will live happily ever after.

He was still living in fantasy land as no one told him that life will be difficult. This means that at times, he will be sent up the emotional creek. Things do not always work the way he expects it to be. He was suddenly faced with this situation and just plain didn’t know how to handle it.

I told CJ to give me a day to analyze his case and promised to have an answer for him the next evening at the latest. At the same time, I cautioned him not to do anything untoward himself or others. He said that he wouldn’t and appeared to me to be less tense when he left.

I suffered the whole night racking my brain thinking of a solution for this person. I wasn’t able to sleep as I felt for the hurt pride that this person was facing.

By 4 am it became abundantly clear to me that he did not truly get to know her (his wife) before they got married. They just instantly fell in love when they met and decided that they should just get married as soon as they could. Therefore, that is exactly what they did. I compared the planetary positioning of CJ and his wife’s chart. Based on my analysis, I found that this was just a passing phase in their relationship. The difficulties that he was facing in accepting that his wife was not a virgin when he married her would pass by the next month. I felt relieved for him and was then able to sleep soundly.

The next morning, good old CJ was waiting outside of my office even before I started my consultation for the day. He said he could not sleep last night and several nights before and is losing his mind thinking about his predicament. He then asked me if I had found the solution.

I said I did. I then told him that I needed to ask him a question before I could tell him the solution. I said, “CJ why didn’t you have your truth session before you got married?” He said that he had not thought about it then.

I then told him that what happened before he met her was after the fact and that he has to grow up and grow out of his immaturity and that love is a constant journey to happiness – he is one lucky miserable fellow. He ignited with reassurance to life reality and became a better person for it
