

---

The Third House

---

By Chris Lambert

When we enter the third house of the chart, the year ahead is likely to provide opportunities for growth and expansion in such areas as further education, travel [short journeys], discovering new aspects regarding how we communicate and investigating new learning procedures.

If we are aware of this potential right at the beginning then we can take the initiative and play an active role in learning something new, examining the whole area of communicating, be that how we can improve our own ability to communicate to others, or possibly a course in the communications field. Learning another language might be an excellent example.

This could prove to be a beneficial time to commence writing our memoirs, start writing a book, submit articles for publication, improve our communication skills or start a correspondence course. Any effort put into learning something new would have more chance of success than previously, and it would be a shame to let this opportune time frame slip into oblivion without harnessing the beneficial energy to our advantage.

Issues relating to siblings often have a way of presenting themselves at this juncture, maybe an opportunity to resolve early family problems, or reconnecting with brothers or sisters that we may have been out of touch with for a long period.

For the mature person, who may not be too familiar with modern technology, taking time to master computer skills might be worthy of consideration.

If a change of career were to be under consideration at this juncture, anything connected with technology and the communications industry could prove to be very favourable.